TOP 12 FACTS ABOUT SLOVENIAN WINE & WINEMAKERS

Here are a dozen interesting by the number facts about our tiny country that is obsessed with wine in a very big way:

- 55-60 million liters of wine are produced each year by registered winegrowers, with some unofficial estimates as high as 80 to 90 million liters
- 6 million liters of wine are produced annually by Klet Brda, making it the largest producer in the country
- 28,000 - There are around 28,000 registered winegrowers in Slovenia, and some 2,700 are commercial wineries
- 15,261 hectares of registered vineyards in Slovenia
- Less than 0.1% of Slovenia's landmass is dedicated to vineyards
- Less than 10% - The maximum amount of alcohol allowed by law in Dolenjska's protected Cviček wine
- 1239 was the year in which Ptujška Klet was founded, making it the oldest winery in Slovenia
- 400 years - The oldest noble grape vine in the world resides in Maribor, where it has been growing for more than 400 years
- 170 years - In Gornja Radgona they have been producing sparkling wines for over 170 years
- 70/30 - About 70% of Slovenia's production is white wine and 30% red wine
- 4.60 liters - The amount of pure alcohol from wine that Slovenians drink per capita annually
- 7th stanza - The lyrics for the country's national anthem were taken from from the 7th stanza of iconic 19th-century poet France Prešeren's poem 'Zdravljica' ('A Toast')

PRIMORSKA

Primorska (or the Slovenian Littoral, as it is sometimes translated in English) is the most developed, promoted and consequently well-known of Slovenia's three wine regions. It has a climate that benefits from its proximity to both the Mediterranean and the Alps, meaning the area is sometimes called the Slovenian California.

GORIŠKA BRDA is one of Slovenia's foremost wine-growing areas, and only an hour's drive from Ljubljana. Often described as a miniature version of Tuscany, most of the vineyards are smaller family-run operations, and almost all offer some combination of wine tastings, tours, meals, accommodation and of course wine sales.

VIPAVSKA DOLINA Viticulture is one of the most important agricultural activities in the fertile Vipava Valley. The small, family-based vineyards are mainly concentrated on terraces in the higher areas where the excellent soil allows both white and red varieties to be cultivated. Thanks to its unique geography and mix of Mediterranean and continental influences, the valley contains numerous microclimates that give rise to distinctive local wine styles.

The KRAS wine district is distinguished by the unique terrain upon which it sits, namely, a limestone Kras plateau above the bay of Trieste covered by a thin layer of reddish-brown soil that receives both an abundance of sun throughout the year, as well as strong wind known as the Burja. The end result is the perfect climate for growing a variety of grapes, especially those for making earthy red wines, such as the geographically protected Teran.

SLOVENSKA ISTRA (Istria) is the coastal part of the country, and has long been influenced by its proximity to the sea and Italy, with a tradition of winemaking that goes back to Roman times. While many different wines are produced here, the most typical of the region is Refošk. Other reds include Cabernet Franc, Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot. The main white wine is Malvazija (Malvasia), which is said to be richer than that from other areas.

PODRAVJE

Covering the entire northeastern portion of the country, Podravje is officially subdivided into two districts: Prekmurje in the far north-eastern corner, and Štajerska Slovenija everywhere else. It should be mentioned that some guides divide the region into seven districts, with names bearing excessive hyphenation that can be quite confusing even for Slovenes, so for the sake of clarity we've decided to stick with the official designations. Semantics aside, the region is synonymous with white wines, and is known for producing some world class dessert wines, as well as Slovenia's first sparkling wines.

The wines of ŠTAJERSKA reflect the Germanic influence the region has often fallen under, so you'll find an abundance of Riesling here, under the names Laški rizling and Renski rizling, as well as Traminec (Gewurztraminer), Sauvignon and Šipon, a personal favourite of ours. The rich opoka soil is a blessing for winemakers, and also gives the district's wines their distinctive minerality. The vineyards around Jeruzalem and Radgonsko Kapelske Gorice are especially notable, with the latter famous for its penina (ie sparkling wines). When in the area don't miss the chance to visit the World's Oldest Vine in Maribor city centre, the only plant in the world with its own museum. There are many famous wine cellars in Štajerska, that are worth a visit.

PREKMURJE is found in the far northeast corner of Slovenia, wedged between the borders with Austria, Hungary and Croatia, and much of the winemaking activity here takes place in the areas of Lendava and Goričko. The landscapes are quite breathtaking, with forests and rolling hills covering much of the countryside, while the pace of life is noticeably slower and more relaxed than most other places in the country. This district is notable for the number of younger winemakers trying new methods or rediscovering old ones, and even amongst their fellow Slovenians the people of Prekmurje have a well-deserved reputation for being the very friendliest and most welcoming.

POSAVJE

The Posavje region is most associated with the light, fresh and slightly sour cviček wine from the district of Dolenjska. The smaller districts of Bizeljsko-Sremic and Bela Krajina are located along different segments of the Croatian border, and are two of the more charming places to visit in Slovenia.

The historical region of DOLENJSKA (or Lower Carniola) covers most of the Posavje wine region, and while the Dolenjska wine-growing district is more modest in size, it remains an important part of Slovenia's winemaking landscape. However, most producers here are small (even by Slovene standards) family-run operations, and sometimes it can seem as if every individual family has their own vineyard. When it comes to wine, Dolenjska is synonymous with one variety: Cviček, a uniquely Slovenian blend that holds official EU protection.

While BIZELJSKO-SREMIČ is not among Slovenia's better-known or more frequently visited wine districts - and is often considered one of the lesser-known regions - it remains an integral part of the country's winemaking landscape and often finds its place on itineraries for visitors eager to explore Slovenia's varied and characterful wine regions. Modra Frankinja, Laški Rizling, Sauvignon and Chardonnay are the dominant varieties grown here, and there are a few award-winning producers, most notably the sparkling wines of Istenič. However, the reason we visit time and time again has less to do with the wine we drink and more to do with the incredible wealth of sights in the area and the friendly folks who operate them.

When you see the BELA KRAJINA wine-growing district on a map, you'd be forgiven for thinking that it's somewhat peculiar looking - as it mainly consists of the hills surrounding the town of Metlika along the border with Croatia, with a narrow strip of territory extending down through Semič and into the town of Črnomelj. The pride of the microclimate is the local blend known as Metliška Črnina, made from at least 60% Modra Frankinja (Blue Franconian) and 30% Žametna Črnina, which is a dry ruby-red that has a rich, velvety flavour.
